One More Round for the Legacy

The Fullmer Legacy Foundation empowers youth, adults, and community through boxing, mentorship, and wellness programs. This campaign honors the past and fuels the future, ensuring the Fullmer's family legacy continues to transform lives across Utah.

Once a shy fifth grader, Tanner Gurule found confidence and purpose through the Fullmer gym. Today, he's a state representative for boxing in Utah, proof that when you invest in one young person, you change generations. Your generosity helps support kids today like Tanner.

"I'll tell you what really makes a difference is when you see somebody's life change a little bit, and you see it improve their life. Then they come and thank you for it. Then that makes it all worthwhile." - Larry Fullmer, Board Chair

Boxer Highlight – Meet Estrella “Star” Sanchez

Star is one of the toughest and hardest working young women in our gym. She shows up with heart, discipline, and a drive that lifts everyone around her. When we talk about building champions in and out of the ring, she is exactly who we are talking about.

Hi my name is STAR Sanchez I am 16 Yrs old I grew up in foster care in and out of home's looking for place to belong so when I got out of the system I wanted to make a change in my life and stick up for myself and I wanted to learn self defense and not feel like a failure so my ^{single parent} mom decided to put me in boxing at central boxing and I boxed there for a couple months then I got in the ring with my uncle I fell in love with it and I wanted to spend more time with him and ~~build~~ build our bond and helped me feel like I was worth something and I wanted to show girls that they can do anything they put there mind too as long as they have self ~~discipline~~ discipline I want to thank fullmer's foundation they have given me the great opportunity to not only travel and meet people that have the same goals as me. The Year the Gym Filled Up

This has been a standout year for the Fullmer Legacy Foundation. In 2025, a record 240 kids registered for our programs, the highest enrollment in our history. Families are seeking structure, mentorship, and a place where young people can grow, and they are finding it here.

Walk into the gym on any weeknight and the momentum is unmistakable. Bags moving in rhythm. Coaches guiding and encouraging. Younger athletes watching the older ones. Parents quietly celebrating small victories from the sidelines. This is how confidence builds. This is how community grows.

Stories like Tanner Gurule's remind us what is possible when a young person finds belonging and direction. Parents like Adriana Rodriguez tell us why this work matters, sharing how her daughter found her voice and confidence through our coaches and programs.

The opening of the Fullmer Legacy Center helped fuel this growth, giving kids a safe and inspiring place to learn, train, and connect. Our coaches and volunteers stepped up every day to make room for every child who walked through the door.

As we look ahead, the message is simple. The legacy is growing, and this community is building champions one round at a time.

Pedaling for Parkinson's

The Fullmer Legacy Center is proud to host Pedaling for Parkinson's classes. Partnered with the University of Utah Health Movement Disorders Clinic and the Cleveland Clinic's Center for Neurological Restoration, we are honored to be able to support families facing neurological challenges by giving them hope, care, and community.

Our participants are able to reduce symptoms, improve their motor function, enhance brain health, and have a supportive community.

Testimonial: Jerry, 82 yrs old

"I was the very first recruit for this program and began in April at the University of Utah and then transferred down to the Fullmer Legacy Center here in South Jordan. I think the program is great. I love it! It's hard and I come in work out hard but I think that's what's great about it. If I didn't have it, I don't think I would work out quite as hard. A lot of evidence suggests and proves actually, that working out hard in this type of a program three times a week can substantially reduce the progression of Parkinson's, and that's what's happening. I feel it. I enjoy it. I love the company!"
